PEPSICO SUCCESSFULLY DEFENDS AGAINST TRADEMARK LAWSUIT CONCERNING MTN DEW RISE ENERGY DRINK

PepsiCo Inc. has emerged victorious in a potential trademark infringement lawsuit filed by Rise Brewing Co. This legal action accused PepsiCo, a major player in the beverage industry, of unauthorized use of the "Rise" brand name in connection with its MTN Dew Rise Energy drink. However, the case was ultimately dismissed by a Federal court in New York. The court ruled in favor of PepsiCo's argument that substantial differences existed between the two brands, leading to a favorable outcome for the company.

DUA LIPA'S HIT SONG "LEVITATING" IS FACING A COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT LAWSUIT

Songwriters L. Russell Brown and Sandy Linzer, the ones who initiated the lawsuit, claim that "Levitating" incorporates "compositional elements" from their song "Wiggle and Giggle All Night" without proper authorization. The US judge ruled that the plaintiffs had presented sufficient facts to support their copyright infringement claim and emphasized that it could not rule out the possibility for the plaintiffs to meet the challenging standard of proving substantial similarity.

NEW ZEALAND COMMERCE COMMISSION APPROVES MICROSOFT'S ACQUISITION OF ACTIVISION BLIZZARD

The New Zealand Commerce Commission has granted its approval for Microsoft to acquire Activision Blizzard, a video game company who owns popular titles such as Call of Duty and Candy Crush. In reaching the decision, the Commission considered the significance of Activision games for local gamers and whether Microsoft's ownership would hinder competition by restricting access to these games on various platforms. The Commission asserted that the acquisition would not adversely affect competition in New Zealand's gaming market.
